Stevia is a natural sweetener and sugar substitute derived from the leaves of the plant species Stevia rebaudiana, native to Brazil and Paraguay.

The active compounds are steviol glycosides (mainly stevioside and rebaudioside), which have 50 to 300 times the sweetness of sugar, are heat-stable, pH-stable, and not fermentable. The human body does not metabolize the glycosides in stevia, so it contains zero calories, like artificial sweeteners. Stevia's taste has a slower onset and longer duration than that of sugar. The legal status of stevia as a food additive or dietary supplement varies from country to country. In the United States, high-purity stevia glycoside extracts have been generally recognized as safe (GRAS) since 2008, and are allowed in food products. The European Union approved Stevia additives in 2011, while in Japan, stevia has been widely used as a sweetener for decades.

Energy-up Drink

Energy UP Drink is used to increase the level of blood sugar (glucose) when the level falls too low (hypoglycemia). Glucose in this form increases the level of the blood sugar, so it is a glucose-elevating agent. Energy is required for the normal functioning of the organs in the body. Many tissues can also use fat or protein as an energy source but others, such as the brain and red blood cells, can only use glucose.

Dextrose is actually a type of simple carbohydrate. Carbohydrate is main source of energy for the body cells. Dextrose rapidly releases energy this helps to provide the high energy required for intense training and also helps to remove the fatigue post exercise. When glucose levels fall to hypoglycemic levels, cells cannot function normally, and symptoms develop such as nervousness, cool skin, headache, confusion, convulsions, or coma. Zinc is an active participant in numerous functions and reactions in the body, including immune system function, synthesis of DNA and protein, cell metabolism, wound healing, cell division, proper sense of smell and taste, and proper growth. Deficiency of zinc can make a person more susceptible to disease and illnesses.

Benefits of vitamin C may include protection against immune system deficiencies, cardiovascular disease, prenatal health problems, eye disease, and even skin wrinkling.

Build strong muscles

Supports Bone Health

Gives Energy For Longer Duration

Around 73% of the Indian diets are protein deficient. 84% of the vegetarian diets are low on protein as against the non-vegetarian ones which are 65 % short of mandatory protein requirements, the study conducted by market research firm IMRB claimed. It is said that around 93 % of the respondents were unaware of their ideal protein requirement. According to the Institute of Medicine (IOM), the Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for protein is Minimum 0.8 g per kilogram (kg) of body weight per day.

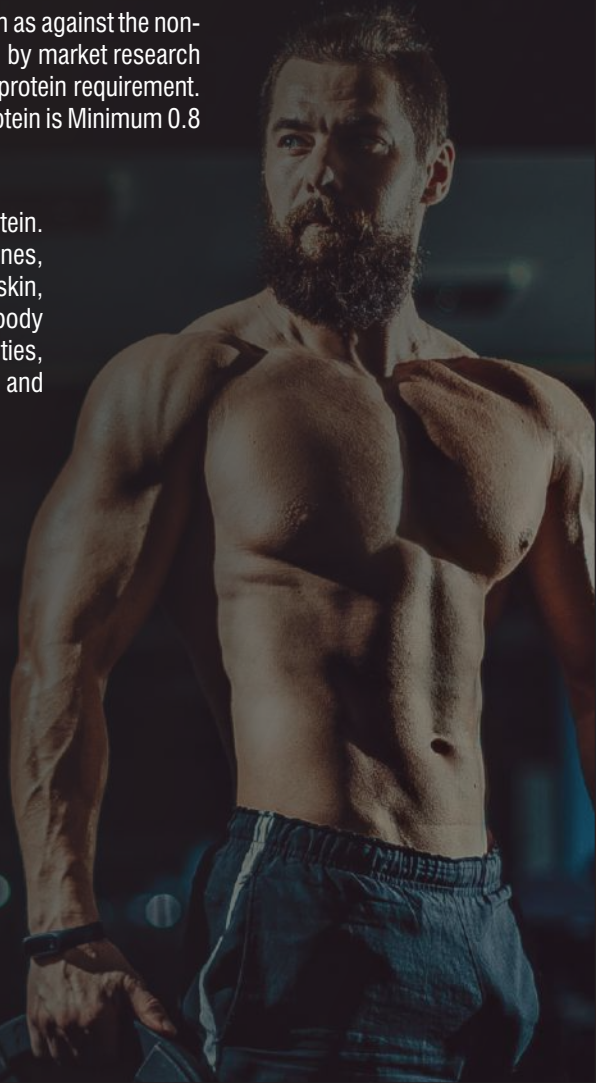

Protein is an important component of every cell in the body. Hair and nails are mostly made of protein. Your body uses protein to build and repair tissues. You also use protein to make enzymes, hormones, and other body chemicals. Protein is an important building block of bones, muscles, cartilage, skin, and blood. Along with fat and carbohydrates, protein is a "macronutrient," meaning that the body needs relatively large amounts of it. Vitamins and minerals which are needed in only small quantities, are called "micronutrients." But unlike fat and carbohydrates, the body does not store protein, and therefore has no reservoir to draw on when it needs a new supply.

Ayuhale protein powder contains dual protein(Soy and whey) with all essential amino acids that maintains bone and muscle mass. It contains Soy protein which is rich in fibre, isoflavones & proteins and it provides the body with lecithin which is an essential building block for the body. It has adequate carbohydrate to maintain protein-energy ratio and comes in delicious flavor. This powder is a balanced protein supplement to fulfill the daily protein requirements of the body. Oxidation basically occurs all over the body and at a cellular level. There is an oxidation reaction theory that states that oxygen reacts within the body and produces by-products called free radicals. The process of oxidation & Free Radicals in the human body damages cell membranes & other structures, accelerates the ageing process, inflammation in joints (arthritis), damage to nerve cells in the brain.
